President’s Letter

Renewal, Transformation, and Growth

Each season brings us a new perspective. Spring, for me, has always been a time of renewal, transformation, and growth. All the seeds of information and empowerment that were planted through the winter months are ready to sprout. NFBPWC leaders work tirelessly to bring our membership engaging and intriguing content throughout the year with a focus on learning more in the downtime of the winter months. Our online meetings continue to attract new people and ideas. NFBPWC members utilize the darker times of the year to discover ways to improve themselves both personally and professionally and prepare for growth as the season changes to summer. Our organization has offered these opportunities for over 5 years, as we had already adopted the online meeting platform long before many organizations when the pandemic hit in 2020.

Our event, Global Collaboration to Tackle Period Poverty, at this year’s United Nations 68th Commission on the Status of Women (CSW) garnered more than 100 participants, over 70 people attended in-person. Congratulations to Young BPW Executive, Emily VanVleck, on a successful event and a huge amount of appreciation for all her hard work. A special thank you to BPW Canada, specifically Karin Gorgerat, for partnering with NFBPWC for this year’s event. Additional thanks to BPW Canada for including Past National President Sandra Thompson and President Megan Shellman-Rickard to receive delegate passes to the United Nations for this year’s CSW event. Congratulations to our Young BPW member, Djenabou Bah, for presenting on behalf of BPW International’s Young BPWs. NFBPWC had great representation at this year’s CSW event, and we look forward to including even more members in 2025!

Upcoming events for the National organization are not quite slowing down yet. In the month of April we have “Pitch Like a Pro” presented by the Entrepreneur and Small Business Committee on April 10th (https://www.nfbpwc.org/event-5266589), “Earth Day Café” celebrating Earth Day presented by the Environment and Sustainable Development Committee on April 22nd (https://www.nfbpwc.org/event-5592088), and the annual Heart of a Woman Conference in partnership with the Houston Methodist Hospital and the Health Committee on April 27th (https://www.nfbpwc.org/event-5687048). Please take a moment to check your schedule and participate as a member. Supporting our committees and the hard work put into these events only serves to strengthen our organization now and in the future.

Our organization has the propensity to inspire, empower, and connect members as we work together for gender equity. We can nurture our connections by starting with compassion, grace, and active listening. Members of this organization motivate others by finding a path in BPW that makes this community a vibrant part of their lives. A simple spark of an idea can turn into an international project, a national initiative, or an influential local program. As business and professional women, we can nurture each other’s ideas and potential while acknowledging our limitations. Our network connects us to phenomenal people and unique opportunities. We have a community of members on which we can rely for both expertise on subjects and ears to listen.

Let us take a moment as we celebrate Earth Day, and this beautiful world in which we live, to remember that all of the members of this organization do their part to make a difference. We offer a community to each other, one in which we can find solace and solutions. And let us not forget to be kind and accepting of each member’s journey in this organization as we endure these extraordinary moments of history (and herstory).
Please remember, you have an opportunity to provide constructive input and to find your own unique path in this organization. This is a chance to develop your potential, and that of NFBPWC, in a safe and welcoming space. Please continue to bring your ideas, projects, and your own light forward. Let us celebrate our successes as individuals and as an organization!

NFBPWC is living our theme for this biennium: Cultivate Connections, Create Community. Sending personal wishes of celebration, health, and progress around the globe!

Kind Regards,

Megan Shellman-Rickard

Member Spotlight

Kara LC Jones (CAIC, CRMT, BA)

I’m white, American born, cisgender woman with Italian heritage, and though I know all the curse words in Italian, truly, I only speak English. Since 1996, I’ve been in a monogamous, heterosexual commitment with a cisgender man who is Black and German. (Truth be told, I also know a few curse words in German, too.) We live in a community we were lovingly introduced to by a friend on Vashon Island, Washington.

My biggest grief experiences came with the deaths of three babies at birth. I’m a mom who has living and dead children, mom in a blended family, and now a grandma, too.

My continued exploration of grief comes in around chronic illness. I have multiple chronic illness diagnoses (ME/CFS, PCOS, MCAS), though some of what is happening with my health is still a mystery. Given the state of our healthcare system here in America, I’m not entirely sure the root cause will ever be found. Anxiety and depression are part of my experiences at times, too, as the mystery part of being chronically alive can get to me. For the most part, I pass as abled which has both advantages and disadvantages.

I’m a Certified Appreciative Inquiry and Whole Systems Coach, and a graduate of Carnegie Mellon University, holding double degrees in Literary and Cultural Theory and Creative Writing. I also have a minor degree from Chatham College in Early Childhood Development. I interned for three years at Family Communications (FCI) on production of Mister Rogers Neighborhood. I have authored several books including Mrs. Duck and the Woman, Flash Of Life, and 1000 Permissions Granted. I have contributed to publications such as They Were Still Born, Journal of Family Social Work, Living With Grief, Elegy, and more. For more see either GriefAndCreativity.com or CreativeGriefStudio.com.

What year did you join BPW?

WHY did you join BPW?

Well my very best, very first friend ever Daneene Monroe Rusnak introduced me to BPW and invited me to speak at a JDEI meeting on my creative grief heARTwork around raising grief literacy for individuals but also as a cultural imperative. It was a lovely Zoom meet up, and Sher and Daneene both encouraged me to check out more about BPW. And here we are.

HOW has BPW helped your career and personal lifestyle?

Learning the history of the organization going back to 1919, it's heartening to think of all the women who've come before me unfolding the paths I've been able walk in my GenX iteration! I'm looking forward to learning more about the different programs and goals of BPW currently happening.

What wisdom can you pass on to other members?

One of the things that I keep seeing in the past few years is how much unprocessed grief and trauma we are enduring as individuals, all the way up to the socio-cultural level. It feels similar to me to seeing the unprocessed grief I saw when I was young in the WWII survivor generation of our family when they were all still alive. Today it feels like seeing a mirror of that unprocessed grief in my grandchildren as they are urged to "get back to normal" and "get back in the classroom in person" as quickly as possible without a lot of processing around the realities that they are sick over and over again. Not much has changed in infrastructure to protect them. But they have to get on with it. I keep seeing videos and social media posts from people my age or my children's ages saying things feel "off" or they've not been able to "go back to normal" and they wonder if they are alone in it. I am encountering more and more newly disabled people everyday who can no longer work the way they once did and question how to continue on with very little support. I see new videos every single day from people saying their work is no longer meaningful, they can barely make the ends meet, they don't understand why they are "failing."

As I witness all this, my inner monologue is naming it grief, grief, grief; not individual failing, but collective experience of systems failure. Grief shakes our sense of identity, our priorities even in things like the work we used to hold dear, our faith even. Because the grief we are all experiencing is unnamed, it hasn't even begun to be processed. So much of what we are experiencing, personally and collectively, is grief. But our grief literacy levels in this world are not great. I would say the wisdom I have to share is this: if you feel any level of what I'm describing here, please know you are not alone. This is the reaction humans are meant to have in the face of loss. We are meant to re-making meaning. We are allowed to be creative in the face of grief. Being creative is more than artmaking or dancing. It is an approach to life. It is an approach to living in the face of loss and on-going humanness.

How does BPW benefit by having you as a member?

It struck me in the JDEI session that maybe talking about raising our grief literacy skills on a larger platform for women would be a beneficial thing to do for all of us. So many of us are carrying around the role of holding the grief for ourselves, our families, our workplaces. We need more support in doing that, in fortifying our grief literacy skills, in being with each other individually and collectively in grief support. It seemed maybe with your focus areas on advocacy as well as health and wellness, maybe there would be a good match here.

2nd Vice President Advocacy Report

By:  Daneene Monroe Rusnak, 2nd Vice President of Advocacy, NFBPWC 2020-2024

#ShoutForEquality

Thanks to a brand-new technology developed by the ad agency Ogilvy, ERA Coalition has introduced the Shout for Equality campaign to help increase the number of signatures received for the Sign4ERA initiative.

This innovative approach is bubbling with “viral” potential and that is exactly what we’re all hoping for.

Stay tuned for more details on how we, as NFBPWC members and friends, can show our support en masse. To learn more about the campaign, visit www.shoutforequality.com.

HERstory On Broadway!

Opening night on Broadway for Suffs the musical will be on April 18th at the Music Box Theatre. Written by Shaina Taub and co-produced by Malala Yousafzai and Hillary Clinton, Suffs (the name that suffragists called themselves), is set in 1913 when support for the 19th Amendment is gaining traction. View the Suffs website to learn more about this amazing production.
Great Resource About the ERA

Shout out to Virtual Chapter member Kathy Telban who, as a part of ERA-OH, helped to create an excellent ERA flyer with a self-test and loads of resources as a part of their Women’s History Month initiatives. View that creation here.

Are you ready to “Get Educated, Agitated, and Activated?”

Discharge Petition Update

Representative Rep. Thomas R. Suozzi [D-NY-3] added his signature to HJ Res 25 on March 22, so we now have 210 signatures on the discharge petition. Only 8 more are needed! Please continue to spread the word and encourage other representatives to sign.

Are you curious to know which legislators have signed the discharge petition and which legislators we still need to encourage? You can check this list to see who the current signatories are.

Here’s some suggested verbiage when connecting with your representative about the Discharge Petition for HJ Res 25=>

Suggested Verbiage for Discharge Petition Support

Share this information with folks you know who are constituents of the representatives who have not yet signed.

Reminder:

Don’t forget to use our digital advocacy platform to show your support for the ERA and Voting Rights while encouraging your MOC’s to do the same! You can complete these actions multiple times. Consider making it a weekly (or daily?????) habit. The more messages received, the more they listen…..and hopefully, take favorable action!

LGBTQ+ Team Report

By: Susan Oser, NFBPWC Advocacy Team LGBTQIA+ Lead

LGBTQ+ Icon of the Month: Dorian Corey

Why highlight?

Dorian Corey was a prominent black fashion designer in the 1970s and 80s. She was drag queen who sought to find a way to bring the drag queen style to what we know of it today: big, bold, and beautiful. She was infamously known for using feathers, beads, and sequins in her designs. As result, these designs inspired other women’s fashion that are seen as big and bold on the runway today. Her message was that it’s ok to create a story with your fashion no matter who you are and if you are performing in front of the crowd or not.

ERA Team Report

By: Nancy Werner, NFBPWC Advocacy Team ERA Lead

EQUAL RIGHTS AMENDMENT
100th ANNIVERSARY MARCH

Advocacy –Equal Rights Amendment. “Equality of rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or any State on account of sex” needs to be placed into our Constitution. While most states have laws prohibiting discrimination of any kind based on sex, proponents of the E.R.A. say laws can be reversed or eliminated. Having a Constitutional Amendment would cement those rights.

The latest news on the Equal Rights Amendment would be with Senator Kirsten Gillibrand-D New York. She has placed into the Senate bills - SJRes 39 calling for the Archivist to publish the ERA. On March 3, she spoke at a luncheon for the need for the ERA because of its ability to protect repro rights. She was wearing the “Biden Publish the ERA” button for the second half of the luncheon.
She has shared that she is working very carefully to have President Biden instruct the Archivist to publish. Publication needs to happen ASAP to stem the flood of cases rolling back women’s rights.

The Archivist is Collen Joy Shogan, and she took office on May 17, 2023. She succeeds Mr. Ferrerio upon his retirement in 2022. We need to be sending our messages to our President Biden encouraging him to tell our Archivist to sign the ERA amendment as our 28th amendment to the Constitution.

SIGN4ERA - May I encourage you AGAIN to take the time RIGHT NOW to sign onto this link. http://www.sign4ERA.org

When you visit this site, there is much information given to you from the history to the current work and why it is so important to all of us.

I just received my correspondence from this group as they share the urgency of telling all our families, neighbors, coworkers to sign on. Presently there are 91,000 signatures but we need more! Lots more.

Please keep in touch with your Senators using the NFBPWC “One Click.”
Bylaws & Resolutions Report

By: Trudy Waldroop, Bylaws & Resolutions Chair, NFBPWC 2022-2024 (Email: ILoveBPW@yahoo.com) Bylaws@NFBPWC.org

BYLAWS
Part 3

What is the difference between bylaws amendments and a bylaws revision?

Amendments

Amendments are the changes made to words or sentences, or entire paragraphs, sections or an Article in your organization’s bylaws.

There is a separate Article in every organization’s bylaws titled Amendments. In it are the procedures to propose a bylaws change, who can propose a change, at what meeting they will be voted upon, how many days before they are to be voted upon, to whom the proposed change goes to, and that every member must directly receive a copy of the proposed change along with the rationale.

Revision

A revision is a major change in bylaws. Preparation of a proposed revision is ordered by an organization when the amendments needed are so extensive that they warrant redo of a major portion of, or all of, the bylaws. Consideration of the committee’s proposed revision requires the same notice that amendments do. Everything in the proposed revision is subject to amendment by the assembly. The amended proposal, if adopted, replaces the “old” bylaws.

Bylaw amendments can be found in Robert’s Rules of Order Newly Revised sec 57, page 560.

Reminder:

Deadline to submit proposed amendment/s to the NF Bylaws is May 20, 2024

Also amendments to the Policy and Procedures Manual are due by May 20, 2024.

On April 2, 2024, I will turn 56 years old and fulfill a lifelong dream of flying to Florence Italy on that exact date. In honor of all who are celebrating birthdays this month, I offer the following wish for you.

“This is my wish for you:
Comfort on difficult days, smiles when sadness intrudes, rainbows to follow the clouds,
laughter to kiss your lips,
sunsets to warm your heart,
hugs when spirits sag, beauty for your eyes to see,
friendships to brighten your being,
faith so that you can believe,
confidence for when you doubt,
courage to know yourself,
patience to accept the truth,
Love to complete your life.”

Immediate Past President Report

By: Sandra Thompson, NFBPW’s Immediate Past President

I am sure you all know who Alice Paul is, but do you know much about her. She was a suffragist, feminist, and political strategist. I thought I would share a little about her since at our Biennial Meeting in July on Friday afternoon, we will be visiting her house. This trip is included in your registration. If you are like me, you enjoy visiting old houses and finding out about the people who lived there. Especially ones who did so much to advance women’s rights.

Alice Paul was the architect of some of the most outstanding political achievements on behalf of women in the 20th century. Born on January 11, 1885, to Quaker parents in Mount Laurel, New Jersey, Alice Paul dedicated her life to the single cause of securing equal rights for all.

A leader in the fight to ratify the 19th Amendment in 1920 to extend voting rights to women, Alice Paul authored the Equal Rights Amendment 1923 and spent the rest of her life fighting for its ratification to ensure the U.S. Constitution protects women and men equally.

Alice Paul attended a Quaker school in nearby Mooresstown. She graduated first in her class in 1901. As Paul said years later, “When the Quakers were founded...one of their principles was, and is, equality of the sexes. So, I never had any other idea...the principle was always there.” The Quaker belief that women and men were equal, something of an anomaly for the time period, undoubtedly accounts for the number of Quakers active in the fight for suffrage. Both Susan B. Anthony and Lucretia Mott, leaders of the early suffrage movement, were Quakers whom Paul admired and considered role models.

After spending some time in England, Paul returned to the United States imbued with the radicalism of the English suffrage movement and a determination to reshape and re-energize the American campaign for women’s enfranchisement. She joined the National American Women’s Suffrage Association (NAWSA), one of the leading national organizations working for women’s suffrage.

In 1912, Alice Paul joined her NAWSA colleagues Lucy Burns and Crystal Eastman in a move to Washington, D.C. With little funding and in true Pankhurst style, Paul and Burns quickly got to work organizing a publicity event guaranteed to gain maximum national attention. The well-matched pair designed a massive and elaborate parade for thousands of women to march up Pennsylvania Avenue on March 3, 1913, the day prior to the inaugural parade of President-elect Woodrow Wilson.

Although both NAWSA’s president Carrie Chapman Catt and Alice Paul shared the goal of universal suffrage, their political strategies greatly differed. Where NAWSA concentrated a majority of its effort upon state campaigns, Paul wanted to focus all energy and funding to advance a constitutional amendment.

The divergent strategies led to tension between Alice Paul and NAWSA leadership and in 1914, after initially forming a semi-autonomous group called the Congressional Union, Paul and those who supported the strategy for a constitutional amendment severed ties to NAWSA. Two years later, in 1916, Paul and her supporters formed a new party, the National Woman’s Party (NWP). The NWP moved quickly to organize public events to bring attention to their work. In 1917, the NWP organized the first public picketing in front of the White House in the nation’s history. Until that moment, no one had dared to publicly protest the President of the United States in such a manner.

Called the “Silent Sentinels” because they stood quietly, not speaking or interacting with passersby, groups of women stood outside the gates of the White House, six days per week no matter the weather.

Over the course of weeks, 168 suffragists were arrested, and sent to jail or prison if they refused to pay the fines or admit guilt. While in jail, Alice and the suffragists demanded to be treated as political prisoners, in accordance with the English suffragette methodology. Officials ignored their request, leading Paul and several suffragists to begin a hunger strike. As she had experienced during her hunger strikes in England, prison officials began brutal forced feedings of the suffragists, sometimes done three times per day.

Toward the end of 1917, President Wilson, facing increased pressure and growing criticism of the suffragists’ treatment in prison, reversed his position and announced his support for a suffrage amendment as a “war measure.” In the following months, Wilson met with members of Amidst growing support, in 1919, members of the U.S. House of Representatives and the U.S. Senate voted to pass the 19th Amendment and sent it to the states for ratification.
THE EQUAL RIGHTS AMENDMENT

Many suffragists left public life and activism after the 19th Amendment was enacted, but Alice Paul was not among them. She believed the true battle for legally protected gender equality had yet to be won. With an eye to championing another constitutional amendment, Paul pursued and earned three law degrees (LL.B., LL.M. and D.C.L.) to better understand how legislation and laws were drafted and passed. With this knowledge, she wrote the Equal Rights Amendment (ERA) in 1923. It was introduced to Congress the same year but has yet to be ratified to the U.S. Constitution. Current efforts to ratify the ERA center upon passing legislation in both houses of Congress to remove the time limit assigned to the ratification of the ERA in 1972.

Alice Paul’s life is a vibrant demonstration that one person can truly make a lasting difference. On July 9, 1977, Alice Paul died at the age of 92 in Moorestown, New Jersey, a short distance from her birthplace and family home of Paulsdale.

On the centennial of her birth in 1985, the Alice Paul Institute (API) was founded to honor her legacy and continue the fight for equality for all. Headquartered at Paulsdale, which is now a National Historic Landmark, API is dedicated to preserving Paulsdale, advancing women’s history, and supporting the next generation of female leaders to develop their unique leadership style.

The Alice Paul Institute educates and encourages women and girls to be leaders in their communities and leads national advocacy efforts to advance Alice Paul’s vision for constitutionally protected gender equality through the ratification of the Equal Rights Amendment.

Simple Acts: Join us for Pulse of Earth Day April 22 at 5:30 MDT

The Earth Day theme this year is Planet vs Plastic. The risk of microplastics to everyone’s health is alarming. This month’s ESD article will be sharing the extensive research by EARTHDAY.ORG.

“Our reliance on plastics could be the biggest gamble in the story of human health, in history. We are all ingesting and inhaling microplastics. They are everywhere. Are we just hoping they are safe, or is even the remotest possibility they might be toxic so terrifying, that we can’t contemplate it?” Kathleen Rogers, President, EARTHDAY.ORG

Microplastics are a derivative of the combination of petroleum and over 10,000 chemical additives used to manufacture plastics. These tiny filaments of plastic - microplastics - are in our food (February BPW ESD newsletter article), the air we breathe, inside our homes, the water we drink, our clothes, in our soaps and toiletries, vitamin and medicine capsules, to name a few. There is a frightening in-depth study out, Babies vs Plastics, demonstrating that microplastics in babies’ feces is 10 times higher than that of adults. 90% of toys are made of plastic, and baby bottles, sippy cups, utensils, clothing are all made of plastic.

Microplastics have been found to bioaccumulate in our major organs like the brain, kidney and liver, lung and heart tissue, urinary and gastrointestinal systems, and also in placentas and breast milk. Recent studies link diseases of the endocrine system and central nervous system including Autism Spectrum Disorder, Attention Deficit Hyperactivity Disorder (ADHD), Type 2 diabetes, infertility, and Parkinson’s to microplastics. Microwave heating in plastic containers releases the highest level of microplastics and nano-plastics, more than 4 million microplastics into a small bowl after 3 minutes of heating.

Oil-based plastics make up 69% of the fabrics we wear, such as polyurethane, nylon, spandex. The convenience of these synthetic materials is that they dry quickly, don’t need to be ironed and are water resistant. Every time we wash these synthetic textiles, they release thousands of microplastics into our water depositing 500,000 tons of microplastics into our oceans annually. Of all the plastics we hear about polluting our oceans, synthetic clothing is responsible for 35%.

While extremely harmful leads are being globally phased out, plastic production is increasing with over 390 million tons of plastic produced in 2021, doubling in the past 20 years. 99% of plastic is derived from petroleum. As we work to phase out the use of gas, oil and coal, the fossil fuel companies are rapidly increasing the production of plastics.

How do we solve this microplastic problem? “Global intervention against the plastic crisis is needed now because the costs of failure to act will be immense.” Commission on Plastics and Human Health.

1) EARTHDAY.ORG is asking that the Global Plastics Treaty, draft completion due December 2024, to include a call for 60% reduction in plastic production by 2040. Currently this Treaty is addressing only plastic pollution.

2) Science and industry are developing biopolymers such as polyhydroxyalkanoates and mycelium-composite materials (grown on a mixture of sawdust and wheat bran).

3) Greenwashing is a term with which we are all familiar. Only 9% of plastic waste is recycled despite the plastic industry’s misleading campaign that mass-scale recycling is ongoing. Because of the many different types of plastic, it is impossible to recycle plastic in one process like paper. Sorting and melting down plastic is energy intensive, emitting hazardous chemicals, using large amounts of water, and releasing microplastics directly into waterways. Recycled plastic costs more to produce than virgin plastic making it not cost effective.

4) Legislative action against the use of single-use plastics needs to be top of list.
Bring Back the Pollinators

By: Marikay Shellman, BPW Colorado Virtual Chair, NFBPWC Environment and Sustainable Development Committee (2022-2024)

Heather Holms, Biologist, conservationist, and Author presented an excellent discussion, Native bee specialists, plant hosts, threats and conservation for the Best Practices for Pollinators Summit 2024. I frantically took notes about the 6 bee families and the 20%-45% of native bees that are pollen and nectar specialists. Many of these native bee specialists use only pollen and/or nectar from one species or genus of plants, Narrow Oligolecty. Some, such as the bumblebee, are Polylecty, meaning they use pollen and /or nectar from more than 4 plant families. Heather shared a list of native plants that serve specialists throughout the season.

Plants for Native Bee Specialist throughout the seasons:

Spring
- Salix (Willow)- female uses nectar & male pollen
- Hydrophyllum (Waterleaf)
- Geranium maculation (Wild Geranium)
- Zizia (Golden Alexanders) carrot family
- Dogwood shrubs (Cornus, Coral Red, Red Osier, Artic Fire)

Summer
- Physalis (Ground Cherry) tomatilla
- Dalea (Prairie Clover)
- Amorpha (Leadplant, False Indigo)
- Verbena, Vervain
- Lysimachia (Loosestrife) oil secreting glands attract Native Bees
- Monarda (Bergamot or Beebalm) stem nesting Native Bees
- Cirsium (Thistle) 31 of oligolectic specialists need Native Thistle
- Rudbeckia (Gray-headed or Yellow Coneflower)
- Vernonia (ironweed)
- Cucurbita (Squash, pumpkin, melon) squash bee specialists nest 5” deep- NO TILL
- Helianthus (Sunflower)

Autumn
- Bunch Grasses (Bluestem) Dianthiduim simile Native Bee nest at base
- Solidago and Euthamia (Golden rod) 3 species specific to nesting bees
- Symphyotrichum Eurybia (Aster) 3 species specific to nesting bees

Leave stem stubble of asters, bergamot, and beebalm.

Plant micro-garden with native perennials inside of a container.

Plant a shrubby hedgerow.
Create a habitat to provide for birds by providing 2 trees. This will give natural pest control by attracting barn swallows and red-winged blackbirds.

Rapid Response Committee Report

By: Susan E. Oser, NFBPWC Rapid Response Committee Chair

Issues that will need your attention and need to be addressed.

As Rapid Response chair, it is my job to keep my ear to the ground and eyes to the screen or otherwise on issues that I feel should not only be an issue for us personally but also for your locals to discuss or have a special educational presentation on. The following are a few that I recommend (please note that these are my opinions and do not necessarily represent NFBPWC views or advocacy platform) we all need to pay attention to…especially during this election year:

Voting Rights –

With primaries, local elections and local issues already being voted on, some places have already had issues. This will be of big concern during our key presidential election this year. There are also issues with gerrymandering and changing voting districts. Some of these have already seen court dates with more to come.

Reproductive Rights –

We have already seen in Alabama the concern of what life is defined as and how this issue affects IVF treatment. There have been calls on various fronts to block access to abortion rights, IVF, and other reproductive health care that if passed can have detrimental consequences to women’s health. Reproductive Freedom is a hot issue that is bringing out the vote and should be a hot issue bringing our voices to the table.

LGBTQIA+ Issues –

The LGBTQIA+ community has become the latest political football and excuse to discriminate for no reason, other than political points from one side of the aisle. This is especially true of our transgender brothers and sisters. The recent news of Nex Benedict’s tragedy and the over 300+ anti-trans legislation laws should give us pause to not only educate ourselves but also support a community that has really faced a lot within the last year.

Please connect with Sue Oser at rapidresponse@nfbpwc.org if you have any ideas on topics that should be focused on and discussed as we get into the big election cycle or you feel have not been addressed in this article. In future articles, I’ll be focusing on each of these (and any others suggested by you) for a better understanding and education of the issues.

RE: Oral Statement during the CSW68 General Discussion, Widows for Peace Through Democracy. Margaret Owen, President, read by Susan O’Malley, UN Representative IFBPW

19 March 2024, UN Conference Room 4

If we are serious about reducing poverty, we must address the extreme poverty of uncounted millions of the world’s widows, since it is their poverty that is a root cause of extending and expanding poverty down through the generations, impacting negatively on their children’s futures. Extreme poverty and inequalities are the fuel of conflicts and instability and frustrate efforts towards peace. Armed conflicts cause women to suffer most, especially those who are widowed.

There is no hope of achieving the SDGS, if we continue to ignore the status of widows. Widowhood is the most neglected of human rights and gender issues and has rarely been mentioned in the CSW Agreed Conclusions.
Widows are of all ages, from child widows to young mothers, and elderly grandmothers; (we must dispel the myth that widows are mainly elderly women, supported lovingly by their families). Especially in the global south and in conflict-affected countries, widows remain uncounted and their voices unheard. Nor is attention paid to uncounted “half-widows” (the wives of the missing, or forcibly disappeared) whose lives may be even more wretched than those of formal widows, since there is no closure for them; they live in legal limbo.

The number of widows worldwide is increasing exponentially, due to unsolved armed conflicts, genocides, civil wars, terrorism, natural disasters, the earlier mortality of males over females, and the fact that many women are married to older men. Also, COVID 19 created many more widows since the pandemic tended to kill more men than women. It is essential that data on widows is disaggregated to include “age” and “marital status”.

Member States need to work with widows’ associations to register widows, record their circumstances and needs, ensure that they are given social protections, such as pensions, shelter, food, and that their children are educated, and that they enjoy support for their societal roles, including representation in relevant decision-making bodies.

Across a wide spectrum of cultures, religions, ethnicities, especially in South Asia, Africa and the Middle East, widows’ lives are determined not by modern domestic laws, nor international ones, but by deeply enshrined patriarchal interpretations of religion and customs.

These dehumanize and stigmatize widows, and deny them their basic human rights to inheritance, land and property ownership, access to credit, to mobility, and decent employment. They may be subjected to appalling harmful traditional practices. Widows are often “chased off” from their homesteads, if not forced into marriage with the dead husband’s brother. They may be subject to the sexual torture of “ritual cleansing”, and if elderly, may be stoned to death as witches. Impoverished widows, made homeless, are vulnerable to many forms of economic and sexual exploitation, abandoned without the education or training to obtain decent work.

Research has shown that their poverty is a key driver of widows’ withdrawing their daughters from school, giving, or selling them into child marriage to older men or into the clutches of traffickers. These young girls are fated to become child widows, vulnerable to further exploitation and abuse.

The 2030 agenda speaks about leaving no women “left behind”. But millions of uncounted widows, of all ages, as well as “half widows” are left behind. I have been trying to get widowhood on the agenda of the CSW for over 30 years since our first international workshop on widows at the 1995 Beijing Fourth World Women’s Conference. The good news is that two years ago the GA adopted a Resolution on Addressing the Situation of Widows, Res.76 but will it be implemented? Not unless there is funding for widows’ NGOs so they may take advantage of this Resolution and urge accountability from their governments.

Surely the desperate poverty faced by widows is a call to the Human Rights Council to appoint a Special Rapporteur on Widowhood, and for UN Women to establish a special desk for this scandalously neglected aspect of the feminization of poverty. This indifference cannot continue.
International Relations Chair Report

By: Sandra Thompson, NFBPWC’s International Chair, international@nfbpwc.org

A huge thank you to our Canadian BPW Sisters for allowing me to be a part of their delegation to the United Nations for the Commission on the Status of Women. It was certainly a busy and exciting week.

I had the privilege to attend several Parallel and Side events. The side events were held inside the United Nations and parallel events in various venues outside the UN. I also, attend virtually a Town Hall meeting with the Secretary General, Antonio Guterres. He is from Portugal.

I attended our Parallel Event on Global Collaboration to Tackle Period Poverty which was co-sponsored with our Canadian BPW Sisters.

We had a wonderful turnout. Emily VanVleck did an outstanding job in introducing the subject and guiding the panel. Hopefully you were able to attend. It will be available on our website soon.

I also attended an event put on by the International BPW Young BPWs. The title of their event was The Role of Entrepreneurs/Professional in Addressing Poverty and Empowering Women.

One of the speakers was our own Djenabou Bah who has started her own Travel Agency.

Besides these two I attended several others which were most informative. I encourage you all to attend either in person or virtually next year. There are two weeks of many wonderful events. All of the online events are free. It is a great experience.

Equal Pay

Equal Pay Day in Colorado came so early this year – March 12 – that we weren’t prepared to celebrate it! Colorado reduced its gender wage gap 3 times faster than the rest of the U.S. since 2021, jumping from the 21st smallest gender wage gap to the 6th smallest gender wage gap among the 50 states. BPW Colorado had joined a large coalition of women’s organizations back in 2021 to support the passage of Colorado’s Equal Pay for Equal Work Act (EPEWA), and it is now paying off – literally!
Colorado women now earn 87 cents on a man’s dollar. While that is still not fully equitable, it had been in the 70s seemingly forever. While some pundits attribute the improvement to the recovery of the job market after the pandemic, the truth is that the EPEWA made the difference; it requires employers to announce, post, or otherwise make known all job opportunities. Its success is largely due to it following in the footsteps of other legislation we supported, Colorado’s 2019 Equal Pay for Equal Work Act, which requires full transparency about wages, provides enforcement of pay inequities by the Colorado Department of Labor and Employment, and allows employees to receive up to 6 months of back pay when they are proven to have been underpaid.

Advocacy on Current State Legislation

BPW Colorado’s Legislative Bills Subcommittee continues its diligence considering bills that are going through the Legislature and working with the Colorado Women’s Lobby to advocate on key bills. So far, BPW has taken positions on 84 bills! Here is a summary:

- Under Economic Equity & Justice – 35 bills
- Under Health Equity & Justice – 12 bills
- Under Human Rights – 36 bills

We have decided that our focus bill of the year is House Bill 24-1164, Free Menstrual Products to Students. This bill requires school districts to provide free menstrual products in their girls’ or gender-neutral bathrooms in 25% of schools with students in grades 6-12 by June 2025, increasing by 25% each year until all school bathrooms serving students in grades 6-12 provide these products.

Welcome to Michigan!!!

We never know how much BPW impacts our lives. We had a long-time member in the Upper Peninsula of Michigan who has left a major impact on the lives of Michigan BPW members. Her name was Sarah Hawes. Most of the current members do not even remember her membership in BPW. A few years ago, BPW/Michigan was notified by Sarah Hawes Trust executor of her estate, that she had left a significant amount of money to the state BPW. That significant amount was approximately $80,000.

We then formed a committee to determine the best avenue of investing/using the money to benefit our BPW members. We set up two scholarships amount – the first for $500 for use by a local organization to increase visibility of BPW in their area – the second for $300 for an individual, supported by their local organization, to further their education and assist in increasing visibility of BPW. A grant can be used by the local or individual one time during the year. These grants have impacted our locals and individual members in various ways.

We also used the Trust to make sure all of our members can take advantage of being members of the NFBPWC and the IFBPWC. The impact of this action is yet to be determined and will be discussed again at the state convention of the Michigan members in May 2024.

NC had an exciting meeting on March 21, 2024. We reviewed and revised our bylaws. Thanks goes out to the members in attendance who contributed to the revision. As soon as some logos are added the bylaws will be sent to NFBPWC bylaws committee for approval then put on our NFBPWC-NC page on the website.

During the bylaws revision we determined that Varnell has been fulfilling the role as VP of Advocacy. We apologize for our lack of attention to detail and have corrected this on our Executive Committee list. Thank you Varnell for your willingness to serve.

News around the state of NC and beyond…

Varnell has experienced several losses in her family in the past month. Our hearts go out to her and her extended family.

Jo has accepted a position in PA that will start in July. Congratulations!

Barbara is still camping in her driveway; we wish her well as she continues her floor finishing saga.

Another member has had some medical issues and we wish her a continued and speedy recovery.

Marsha finally found dresses acceptable for her son’s wedding and rehearsal dinner. She will be visiting a seamstress in a nudist colony for alterations. More on that story as it unfolds.

We are 5 strong attending the general assembly in PA. That is ½ of our members. NC challenges all state clubs to send ½ or more of their members to PA!

All are invited to attend any of our meetings on the third Thursday of the month at 8 pm Eastern by registering online at www.nfbpwc.org or contact Marsha at 252-423-0819 (text is ok) or nfbpwcnc@gmail.com

Register for the 2024 Biennial Conference

The PA Affiliate Chapter is excited about hosting the 2024 NFBPWC Biennial Conference (July 18-21, 2024), in King of Prussia, PA, near Philadelphia. The Sheraton Valley Forge Hotel is the Conference hotel and the adjacent Element hotel can also be used for housing. Conference registration and hotel reservations can now be made on the nfbpwc.org website. Nancy Werner serves as Conference Chair. We are looking forward to welcoming members to Pennsylvania in July 2024.

Our focus this year is on increasing membership. In January we welcomed new member Denis Stepanik. In February we welcomed another new member Linda Martin. In March we welcomed five new members - Amy Allegra, Loraine Dixon, Paula Hines, Celina Nemec, and Tisa Vincent.

Since most of our PA Affiliate Chapter members are also members of the BPW/PA Heritage organization we do a great deal of our recruiting at BPW/PA State and local meetings and events across Pennsylvania. Many of us attended the BPW/PA Board Meeting held on March 2, 2024, in State College, PA. I was able to present a report on the PA Affiliate Chapter and provided information about the Biennial Conference. Additionally, we plan to have a vendor table at the BPW/PA State Convention (June 6-9, 2024) where we will promote PA Affiliate Chapter Membership.

Following Gov. Josh Shapiro establishing a Pennsylvania Election Threats Security Task Force to combat misinformation and voter intimidation, PA State Police Commissioner Christopher Paris and PA Secretary of State Al Schmidt discussed with County Commissioners how each department is preparing for the upcoming elections. According to a Government Executive 2/26/24 report, officials across state and local government, including elections officials, have received all manner of abuse including insults, harassment, threats and physical attacks. There are ongoing worries about cybersecurity, ransomware attacks and the role artificial intelligence could play.

At winter meetings for both the National Association of Secretaries of State and the National Association of State Election Directors in Washington, D.C., officials from the Cybersecurity and Infrastructure Security Agency (CISA) and Postal Inspection Service shared their plans to help state and local officials. Tim Langan, executive director for the FBI’s Criminal, Cyber, Response & Services Branch, said there are “myriad types of threats” facing elections, including cyberattacks and foreign influence campaigns. Many attacks revolve around stealing voters’ personal information, he added. Cybersecurity company CrowdStrike said disruptions are more likely to come from nation states looking to sow discord rather than attack systems. Cybersecurity risks are lower for election equipment as it typically is not connected to the internet, but election workers should still be vigilant for information being hacked and leaked online, especially through phishing attacks. With a retiring elections workforce and fewer people willing to step up, Langan said the FBI is devoting lots of “energy, resources and focus” on the 2024 elections in a bid to stay ahead of any threats, especially against polling places. Mail-in voting will also be critical, said Brendan Donahue, assistant inspector in charge at the U.S. Postal Inspection Service. The United States Postal Service delivered 135 million ballots to and from voters in 2020 and another 54 million in 2022.

A conservative group with ties to a Wisconsin billionaire donor backing former President Donald Trump, sued Pennsylvania for denying access to voter lists, according to a 3/4/24 WVIA report. The voter lists include names, gender, dates of birth, party affiliation, home and mailing addresses, polling places and each time a voter voted. In a statement the Pennsylvania Department of State called the suit, “without merit,” asserting the Department’s “duty to protect the private information of voters.” Pennsylvania’s Commonwealth Court agreed that the Department of State could deny the lists. “We do not believe that Pennsylvanians should be required to sacrifice their right to privacy in order to exercise their fundamental right to vote,” the Department of State reiterated.

The last day to register for the Pennsylvania Primary Election is April 8, 2024. The last day to apply for a mail-in ballot is April 16, 2024. The last day for County Boards of Election to receive mail-in or absentee ballots [must be received by 8 PM] is ELECTION DAY April 23, 2024. To minimize the likelihood that an eligible registered voter will make a mistake casting their mail-in ballot, Pennsylvania Secretary of State Al Schmidt announced a redesign of the Mail-in Ballot Envelope. The Shapiro administration announced the mail-in ballot redesign in November 2023 to be rolled out for the April Primary election, according to a 3/5/24 Capital Star report. The design has revised the language about how to fill out and return a mail-in ballot.

There is a more easily identifiable secrecy envelope on a yellow background and coloring to make it easier to tell the difference between the inner and outer envelope. Rejected mail-in ballots accounted for about 3% of the 597,000 mail ballots cast in the 2023 Primary election, but that meant thousands of votes were disqualified due to small errors. “Our hope is that these new materials will better assist voters in making sure their completed mail ballot packet is filled out correctly and can be counted,” Secretary Schmidt said.

WHAT IS “E.M.T.A.L.A.” & WHY SHOULD YOU CARE ON APRIL 24TH?

The EMERGENCY MEDICAL TREATMENT & LABOR ACT, enacted by Congress in 1986, (EMTALA) requires hospitals across the country to guarantee all patients a standard of emergency care, regardless of whether they have insurance or can pay. The law, which was passed to address concerns that hospitals were failing to screen, treat or correctly transfer patients, applies to any hospital that receives Medicare funding and has an emergency department—most hospitals in the United States. Hospitals that violate the law can face consequences including fines and exclusion from further Medicare funding. The law does not mention abortion or name specific treatments for any emergency medical condition. But soon after the Supreme Court overturned the national right to abortion in June 2022, the Biden administration issued a memorandum saying that EMTALA applies in cases where abortion is necessary to stabilize a patient. If an abortion is the stabilizing treatment necessary to resolve an emergency condition, the physician must provide that treatment, the Biden memorandum said. In such a situation, a “state law is pre-empted.”

According to a 1/18/24 New York Times report, Idaho Attorney General Raul Labrador maintains that Idaho’s abortion ban does not violate EMTALA because it requires that emergency departments stabilize both a pregnant woman and an “unborn child.” When the U.S. Supreme Court agreed to hear Idaho v. United States on April 24th, AG Labrador said, “The federal government has been wrong from Day 1. Federal law does not pre-empt Idaho’s Defense of Life Act. In fact, EMTALA and Idaho’s law share the same goal: to save the lives of all women and their unborn children.” The Alliance Defending Freedom (ADF)—a far-right extremist legal organization—is representing the state of Idaho and its legislature.

The National Women’s Law Center filed complaints against two hospitals in Missouri and Kansas for denying an abortion to Mylissa Farmer, whose water broke at 17 weeks’ gestation, less than halfway through the pregnancy. At each hospital doctors told Ms. Farmer that the fetus would not survive because she had lost her amniotic fluid and that if her pregnancy wasn’t aborted, she could develop a severe infection and even lose her uterus. But because the fetus still had cardiac activity, the doctors would not abort the pregnancy. She had to travel to Illinois for an abortion. The Missouri and Kansas hospitals were found in “violation of the EMTALA protections that were designed to protect patients” like Ms. Farmer.

The Idaho case now before the Supreme Court was initiated by the Biden administration. The Justice Department filed suit in August 2022 claiming that Idaho’s abortion ban violated EMTALA because it makes exceptions only for abortions “necessary to prevent the death of the pregnant woman,” but not to address threats to a woman’s health. Some providers could withhold care based on a well-founded fear of criminal prosecution under Idaho’s Defense of Life Act.

Senator Patty Murray (D/WA) held a January 2024 hearing where abortion rights advocates addressed EMTALA. Murray said her state has seen an increase in patients seeking abortions, especially from neighboring Idaho, one of 14 states with near-total abortions bans. Dr. Serina Floyd, Planned Parenthood Chief Medical Officer, denounced the Republican-led attack on EMTALA that grants the right to emergency abortion care, regardless of state bans. “The fact that you would deny someone emergency care that could save their life makes no sense,” Dr. Floyd said. According to a 2/26/24 Center for American Progress report, multiple amicus briefs submitted by medical professionals and emergency care physicians have told the Supreme Court of grave long-term consequences for denial of emergency room abortion. They include severe sepsis requiring leg amputation, uncontrollable uterine hemorrhage requiring hysterectomy, kidney failure requiring lifelong dialysis, hypoxic brain injury and permanent fertility issues.

Idaho is in the midst of a maternal care crisis with a maternal mortality rate that has more than doubled from 18.1 deaths per 100,000 births in 2018 to 40.1 deaths per 100,000 births in 2021. This crisis in maternal care is exacerbated by the fact that Idaho maternity wards have shut down citing the abortion ban as the primary reason. The lack of facilities is compounded by the exodus of OB-GYNS’s, according to a Center for American Progress report. The Court’s Roe v. Wade ruling spurred a mass exodus of OB-GYN’s as scores of pregnant women across the country are turned away from hospitals for urgently needed medical care. The outcome of Idaho v. United States will extend to every state, regardless of whether abortion is legal. The outcome of Idaho v. United States extends to every pregnant woman, medical provider and EMTALA-certified facility in the United States. Even though, in Dobbs, the Supreme Court majority “[left] the question of abortion for the people and their elected representatives in the democratic process, a decision in Idaho v. United States will affect every state, even where voters have fought to ensure that abortion is legal.

STARBUCKS STOPS OPPOSING ITS BARISTAS’ UNION:

“We wanted Starbucks to actually be the company they always said they were,” said Starbucks barista Michelle Eisen who’s worked at the Buffalo outlet that was first to vote to go union back in 2021. In a 2/27/24 joint announcement released by both Starbucks and Workers United, the baristas’ union that is part of SEIU, the company agreed “to begin discussions on a foundational framework designed to achieve…collective bargaining agreements for represented stores and partners.” A 2/28/24 American Prospect report called this a “historic breakthrough,” the “single most important breakthrough American workers have achieved in a very long time.” “Our initial reaction was shock,” Eisen said. “And then tears—lot of tears, of disbelief and then relief.” To demonstrate its good faith to understandably skeptical workers, the company also agreed to let them receive credit card tipping and also receive the back pay from raises and benefits the company had given to all its employees, except those in outlets that had voted to unionize.

In December 2023 the National Labor Relations Board (NLRB) argued that Starbucks had closed stores because employees engaged in union activities or to discourage employees from doing so. The NLRB also asked a judge to order 23 stores to be reopened and employees to be compensated for lost earnings or benefits and for other costs they incurred as a result of the closures. According to a 12/3/23 New York Times report, the labor board issued more than 100 complaints covering hundreds of accusations of illegal behavior by Starbucks, including threats or retaliation against workers involved in union activity and a failure to bargain in good faith. A 2/6/24 HuffPost report said new labor board filings claimed Starbucks recently gave unionized workers smaller raises than nonunion workers, withheld new benefits offered to other employees like faster vacation accrual and scheduling improvements. NLRB offices have filed more than 125 complaints against Starbucks covering over 400 alleged unfair labor practices including illegally firing union supporters, interrogating and surveilling employees, making unlawful threats and refusing to bargain with the union. Starbucks Workers United has roughly 10,000 members.

Harold Meyerson writing in the American Prospect, speculated that what’s changed is that “unions are more popular today than they’ve been in 60 years, and young workers—a description that covers the vast majority of the company’s baristas—are overwhelmingly pro-union. Meyerson noted that as “big business managed to steadily weaken the New Deal’s social contract, private-sector union growth ceased, the middle class shrank, and stratospheric levels of economic inequality came to define today’s American economy.” The United Auto Workers union has just invested $40 million in a campaign to organize the country’s non-union auto and battery plants. The number of American workers who went on strike last year increased 141 percent over 2022 to 539,000. That includes 160,000 actors who walked off the job in the SAG-AFTRA strike. Work stoppages also went up from 433 in 2022 to 470 in 2023, according to the HuffPost.

AMERICA’S RICHEST MEN WANT COURTS TO MAKE UNIONS ILLEGAL:

Elon Musk’s SpaceX, Jeff Bezos’s Amazon and the Albrecht family’s Trader Joe’s, have all asked federal courts to declare the core functions of the National Labor Relations Act (NLRA) ‘unconstitutional.” A 2/22/24 American Prospect headline read: “Today lawyers for Elon Musk’s SpaceX and Jeff Bezos’s Amazon say the court erred in 1937 by letting workers have rights on the job.” SpaceX filed a lawsuit supported by the Federalist Society and other conservative groups, against the NLRB in response to a board complaint that SpaceX fired workers in retaliation for writing a letter over concerns about Musk’s behavior. Amazon’s suit charges the NLRB proceedings deny the company a trial by a jury and violate Amazon’s due-process rights under the Fifth Amendment. Musk and Bezos would prefer federal courts hear cases directly. That would guarantee by the time lawsuits reach the bench, organizing campaigns have become a dim memory. With union approval rating at its highest level in 60 years and the rise of union organizing campaigns threatening corporate profits, Bezos and Musk lawsuits are bold attempts to reverse court rulings of the 1930s and the way American labor law has operated for nearly 90 years. Given the deep hatred that Justice Sam Alito holds toward unions, corporate bosses may hope that Alito can persuade enough of his colleagues to toss the NLRA altogether, as he did with Roe v. Wade, the American Prospect reported.

William Gould IV, professor of law, emeritus at Stanford Law School and chairman of the NLRB from 1994 to 1998 said, “This would raise havoc with the effective administration of labor law in our country which is designed to be for the benefit of workers and the collective bargaining process.” Trader Joe’s lawsuit against the union Trader Joe’s United, was thrown out by a California judge, according to a 2/26/24 report in The Guardian. With cases headed to the Supreme Court, Professor Gould warned that the court’s conservative make-up and recent decisions and opinions from some of the court’s most rightwing judges are threats to unions. “This is a court that is hostile to unions, working people,” Gould said. Seth Goldstein, a labor attorney representing Trader Joe’s United, said, “Firms are really using everything they have to try to stop the new organizing movement. I think that there are some dark forces here trying to stop the emerging organizing movement by perhaps throwing out the National Labor Relations Act…..because they know they are losing the union elections and more young people, genZ and millennials, are attracted to unionizing.” Goldstein told the Washington Post that this trend was “very frightening." Many tycoons were furious when the NLRA was passed in 1935, but the Supreme Court clearly upheld the legality of the board in a 1937 case,” a 2/22/24 American Prospect report said. A 2/26/24 Guardian report by Michael Sainato said “a multi-pronged legal attack under way by Elon Musk, large corporations, business groups and anti-union litigators threatens to ‘raise havoc’ with U.S. labor law and hobble a resurgent labor movement.”

OVER-THE-COUNTER BIRTH CONTROL:

Opill, the first over-the-counter birth control pill approved in the United States, should soon be available in stores and online, according to manufacturer Perrigo. The company has not disclosed how much it will cost, but Opill is already approved for sale without a prescription. How this could work with pharmacists prescribing is, a patient can go in and grab Opill off the shelf. They can take it back to the pharmacy counter, give the pharmacist their health insurance card and the pharmacy can then write a prescription for it. Then it can be covered by the person’s insurance, Michelle Long, senior policy analyst at nonprofit Kaiser Family Foundation, said. “If the person walks into their pharmacy, grabs Opill off the shelf, goes up to the self-checkout and checks out with all their other stuff, it’s not going to be covered by insurance because it doesn’t have the prescription attached to it,” Long added.

Opill uses only the hormone progesterin. CNN 1/12/24 reported among states, policies can look drastically different; 18 allow access for patients of all ages, but some have restrictions around minors requesting pharmacist-prescribed contraception. “Since pharmacists have all of these other responsibilities that they’re doing, they will usually charge a consultation fee for the time it takes to prescribe if they have to conduct a patient assessment and evaluation, and they might have to take a patient’s blood pressure,” Long said. The fee may range somewhere between $30 and $50. About 71% of women, ages 18-44 report interest in pharmacy-based contraception according to a study published in 2023 in the Journal of Women’s Health. “As of right now, insurance plans typically must cover contraception with a prescription, except in a handful of states. But, in general, there’s no federal law that says they have to cover Opill without a prescription,” Long said. In states where pharmacists are allowed to prescribe birth control, patients might be able to get that coverage. Health insurance plans are not required to cover the over-the-counter medication.

Employer health insurance-covered birth control came into effect under the Affordable Care Act (ACA) often called Obamacare, since 2010. That all changed during the summer of 2020 when the U.S. Supreme Court upheld Trump-era regulations granting employers broad rights to deny their female workers no-cost coverage for birth control by claiming religious and moral objections under the 2014 Burwell v. Hobby Lobby Stores ruling. As a result, as many as 126,000 Pennsylvania women lost coverage for free birth control through workplace health plans. Rep. Leanne Krueger (D/Delaware County) introduced legislation in the Pennsylvania General Assembly that would expand access to birth control in the commonwealth. The bill HB1140, required insurers in Pennsylvania to provide coverage for contraception. Rep. Krueger said her “Expanding Access to Contraceptives” bill could help at least 2.5 million women in Pennsylvania who depend on coverage funded by their employers for access to affordable, effective contraceptives. “Contraception is health care, and employers should not be permitted to decide what medical care a woman has the right to receive.”

FEDERAL RIGHT TO CONTRACEPTION ACT:

One month after the Supreme Court struck down the right to an abortion, Democrats, who then controlled the House, passed a bill to ensure access to contraception nationwide. The bill protected the right to purchase and use contraception without government restriction. The 194 Republicans who voted against the Right to Contraception Act claimed they supported contraception in practice, but considered the bill a gateway to allowing abortion, according to a 2/26/24 New York Times report by Annie Karni. A new national poll of 1,800 people conducted in February 2024 by Americans for Contraception, found that most voters across the political spectrum believe their access to birth control is actively at risk. Three out of five voters living in states where abortion has been banned or restricted, said they were concerned that contraception is next.

The National Women’s Law Center administers the CoverHer hotline for navigating if an insurer may be incorrectly billing for contraception. Some patients reported having difficulty accessing certain newer approved forms of contraception or accessing alternative products that may have fewer side effects, according to a 2/22/24 Roll Call report. In January 2024 the Biden administration issued guidance to health insurance companies outlining ways insurers could come into compliance with coverage regulations. The House Oversight Committee has found that plans routinely violate the 2010 ACA health care law by refusing to cover certain products, imposing administrative hurdles like prior authorizations, requiring patient cost-sharing. “Insurers are mandated under the Affordable Care Act to cover FDA-approved contraception, but that doesn’t stop them from consistently looking for loopholes to get out of this requirement,” said Senator Tina Smith (D/MN). “When patients are prescribed birth control by their doctor, they shouldn’t get told their medication is not covered by insurance. Plans need to comply with federal law.” In 2022 the then House Oversight & Reform Committee released a report looking at 34 types of contraception commonly excluded from plans’ coverage, Roll Call reported.
ARE EMBRYOS PEOPLE WITH CONSTITUTIONAL RIGHTS?

Republicans’ reacted to an Alabama Supreme Court ruling on in vitro fertilization. House Speaker Mike Johnson joined a growing chorus of Republicans claiming they support in vitro fertilization treatments. But like many of the other House Republicans now saying they back unrestricted I.V.F., Mr. Johnson is a co-sponsor of the Life at Conception Act, which recognizes a fertilized egg as a person with equal protection under the 14th Amendment. The Life at Conception Act states that the term “human being” includes “all stages of life, including the moment of fertilization” and does not include any exceptions for I.V.F. and fertility treatments. Johnson has sponsored legislation that would ban abortion nationwide at all stages of pregnancy, establishing a “right to life” for fertilized eggs that supersedes women’s rights according to an 11/16/23 Guardian report.

His sweeping antagonism to abortion rights has extended to several kinds of birth control such as IUDs, implants and many birth control pills. In his career as a lawyer for the Alliance Defending Freedom, (ADF) he argued that the most popular kinds of hormonal birth control, and those that are controlled by women, are equivalent to abortion and should therefore be banned. The Guardian also reported that in light of his aggressively misogynist and anti-gay views on public policy, he has condemned no-fault divorce, which allowed women to initiate divorce or to exit marriages without having to prove either infidelity or abuse in a court. “Johnson says without having to prove either infidelity or abuse in a court, that women’s freedom to leave marriages, along with their freedom to elect out of motherhood when they choose, is responsible for mass shootings,” the Guardian also reported. Like many Republicans, Johnson favors a national ban on abortion which he calls a “holocaust.”
